

Mentoring the Mentors Workshop for HIV Researchers

Date: Monday and Tuesday, October 23 and 24, 9:00 am to 4:00 pm

Location: 125 Nashua St, Room 4200

REGISTER FOR THE WORKSHOP

Drs. Jessica Haberer, Sherri-Ann Burnett-Bowie, and Wafaie Fawzi are pleased to bring the well-established “Mentoring the Mentors” Workshop for HIV Researchers to Harvard Medical School. This two-day workshop (modeled after the program held at UCSF since 2012) is an intensive and interactive meeting designed to provide faculty in HIV research with the tools for more effective mentoring, especially of mentees of diversity (defined mainly as those from underrepresented racial/ethnic minorities).

The workshop discusses barriers related to being an early career investigator of diversity (e.g. microaggressions, unconscious bias), and features didactic and interactive sessions on practical tips for mentoring, including sessions on distance mentoring, funding sources for mentoring efforts, time management, leadership styles, manuscript writing, grant writing, individual development plans, teaching work-life balance to mentees, alternative funding strategies, forming teams, etc.

Descriptions and findings from UCSF workshops (1st workshop, 2nd workshop, 3rd workshop) are found here.

This workshop is sponsored by the Fostering Diversity in HIV Research Program (R25MH119857). Due to the interactive nature of this workshop, this will not be a hybrid event.

Financial support is available for those traveling from outside of Boston.

Eligible Participants: Investigators with a faculty appointment currently mentoring early career researchers engaged and/or interested in HIV research.

Registration for the workshop closes Friday, October 6.

Questions can be addressed to: Lindsey Garrison, MPH (legarrison@mgh.harvard.edu)